INTRODUCTION

This document is Volume 2 of entries transcribed from the registers of Saint Andrew's Parish Church. This volume covers the period 1830-1899. Most the events listed here (births, baptisms, confirmations, marriages, deaths, and burials) are taken from the antebellum parish register the clergy of St. Andrew's maintained from 1830 to 1859. No records have survived for the forty-five year period from the end of the colonial register (1785) to the beginning of the antebellum register in 1830. No entries come from the Civil War era and very few after this.

The original antebellum register has survived and is held by St. Andrew's Parish Church but is in fragile condition. It was first transcribed in 1897; paper and microfiche copies are available at the Charleston Library Society, South Carolina Historical Society, and South Carolina Room of the Charleston County Public Library. Only events pertaining to white parishioners, however, were included; most of the entries from the original register, relating to the enslaved, were omitted. To correct this historical wrong, I transcribed the entire, original antebellum register and included these and entries from Rev. Paul Trapier's private register relating to his time at St. Andrew's in the appendix of my 2018 book, "In My Trials, Lord, Walk with Me": What an Antebellum Parish Register Reveals about Race and Reconciliation. Reverend Trapier's original register is archived at the South Carolina Historical Society; a complete transcription was published in the April, July, and October 1957 issues of the South Carolina Historical Magazine. Lastly, a few late-nineteenth century entries are included at the end of the transcribed colonial register and at the beginning of a new register begun when the church reopened in 1948 after a long period of dormancy.

Source abbreviations are as follows:

- AR/IMT/234 means that the entry is taken from the antebellum register, transcribed in "In My Trials," on page 234.
- PT/Oct1957/249 denotes an entry from Paul Trapier's private register, transcribed in the October 1957 issue of the South Carolina Historical Magazine, on page 249.
- CR/Apr1914/97 lists an entry from the colonial register, transcribed in the April 1914 issue of the South Carolina Historical and Genealogical Magazine, on page 97. (It took eleven issues of the SCHGM, from October 1911 to April 1914, to include the entire colonial register.)
- MR/1/114-115/1 indicates an entry from the modern register (covering the twentieth and twenty-first centuries), Volume 1, pages 114-115, line 1.

In colonial days, St. Andrew's was a thriving Anglican church located in one of the wealthiest areas in British North America due to rice, indigo, and the plantation slave system that made it all possible. After the American Revolution, the center of rice production shifted to the tidal areas near Georgetown and the market for American indigo vanished. Antebellum plantation owners in the parish grew mainly staple crops, with some also finding success with sea island cotton, rice, and wool. The Civil War devastated the parish; the only economic bright spot into the twentieth century was the phosphate mining boom which lasted from about 1870 to 1920. As a result, the white population in the parish significantly declined during the nineteenth century, particularly after the Civil War. The number of enslaved remained relatively constant for more than a century, from the mid-eighteenth to the mid-nineteenth century.

This transcription reflects the stark contrast between colonial and antebellum St. Andrew’s Parish. While the eighteenth-century colonial register includes 3,209 events, there are only 501 from the nineteenth century. The antebellum register illustrates the focus that rectors Stuart Hanckel and John Grimké Drayton gave to plantation slave ministry in the twenty years immediately preceding the Civil War. Three hundred sixty-five events (73 percent of all in the nineteenth-century) relate to enslaved blacks in the parish, with only 136 (27 percent) pertaining to white parishioners.

A different format is used to present black and white events. Enslaved blacks are listed alphabetically by first name, since none in these pages had a last name. Each is linked to the plantation and owner where he or she lived and worked. This is the only way to place an enslaved person found in the register at a specific location during these years. Even this convention presents problems, with some owners (e.g., Nathaniel Russell Middleton of Bolton on the Stono plantation, one of the parish’s largest slave owners) having multiple people with the same name at roughly the same time. Marriages are included twice, once under the husband’s name (first name for the enslaved, last name for whites) and once under the wife’s name (first name for the enslaved, maiden name for whites). Spellings are copied as written, unless otherwise indicated. Obvious inconsistencies are addressed.
